New Cleveland Heights city manager delighted to be back home

James Henke

At just 34, Tanisha Briely has what could be called her dream job. In June, she was hired as the new city manager of Cleveland Heights. She started work on Aug. 1.

Briely grew up in Cleveland, mostly on the East Side. She’s the oldest of four children. “We moved around a lot,” she said, “but I was always touched by public administration—my teachers, the people at the rec center and the public housing authorities. I was always impressed by them, and I wanted to give back to my community.”

She attended Collinwood High School, where she was on the girls’ track and basketball teams. She was also a member of the student council, and the senior class treasurer. “I was always very busy during my high school years. I’d get back home until about 10 p.m,” she said.

When she was 16, after her sophomore year, she got her first job as an intern with the Cleveland Department of Water, which furthered her interest in public administration. After high school, Briely attended The Ohio State University, where she got a degree in business administration. She worked as a legislative aide in the Ohio Senate, assisting Mark Mallory, now the mayor of Cincinnati. She also worked in student recruitment and minority student affairs for OSU. “I worked in the Cleveland territory; helping recruit students and

District sees consistent performance in Ohio School Report Card

Angie Shaker

Initial report card ratings from the Ohio Department of Education (ODE) show consistent performance from the Cleveland Heights-University Heights City School District, when compared with last year’s scores.

“We refuse to be content with anything less than excellence, so we recognize that we have a great deal of work to do before our schools are performing to the level our community expects,” said Nyla Jean R. McDaniel, superintendent.

The district’s schools showed tremenduous growth in grades 4-8, based on the value-added data. The value-added analysis is a statistical method that measures the impact schools and teachers have on students’ academic progress from year to year.

“Our four grades of A for the value-added measurements (district overall, value-added, gifted students, value-added, disabled students, value-added and lower 20 percent value-added) show that our students exceeded expected growth in one year’s time,” said McDaniel. “The value-added data shows us that while we are not meeting every indicator, we are helping our students grow and helping them meet and move beyond grade level standards and expectations.

“When the state uses letter grades or labels, the truth is always in the details. In this case, the details show that while we have a great deal of work left to do, our educational strategy is laying the groundwork for continued improvement in the future,” added McDaniel.

Test results from the 2012-13 school year show that CH-UH schools’ overall performance is stagnant—essentially at the same overall level as last year.

Heights Observer 2013 local elections candidate policy

With the November election approaching, the Heights Observer is publishing its policy for contributions by candidates for local office.

As a community newspaper, staffed by volunteers and committed to equal access for everyone, the Observer is unique among publications in providing opportunity for any member of the Cleveland Heights and University Heights communities to raise and discuss issues of local interest.

At election time, however, this commitment creates a challenge in managing the space that is available for community members who are running for public office.

The policy, approved by the FutureHeights Board of Directors, is designed to address that challenge.

It states the following:

• The August-November issues of the printed publication will not carry any editorial contributions from known candidates for office.
• During this pre-election period, Observer contributors who are not running for office will produce any coverage of election issues.
• During this pre-election period, all candidate contributions of news or opinion will continue to be accepted for publication online at www.heightsobserver.org.
• Candidates seeking to place information in the August-November printed editions of the Observer may do so through advertising space purchased from the Observer.
• The Heights Observer and its parent organization, FutureHeights, do not endorse candidates.

FutureHeights board is engaged but not unanimous

Clare Taft

In its more than 10-year history, FutureHeights has never endorsed an issue or a bond issue. We have often discussed issues and published articles to help inform the public and stimulate civic discourse.

In the August Opening the Observer column, our executive director stated that if FutureHeights decided to advocate on behalf of an issue, the opinion would be clearly marked as such.

This year, the FutureHeights Board of Directors (FH) debated whether to endorse Issue 81, the school facilities bond issue. The question the board considered was: Should FutureHeights, as an organization, endorse Issue 81?

We recognize that a comprehensive school facilities project represents a large investment in our community’s infrastructure, the likes of which we have not seen in 40 years.

Last year, after the school board decided not to move forward with Plan C, our organization petitioned the school board to create a Lay Facilities Committee (LFC) to re-examine the school facilities issue, and our executive director served on the committee.

One of our board members, Mark Chapp, served as a consultant to the LFC’s communications subcommittee.

FH gave thoughtful consideration to whether or not we should endorse Issue 81 as an organization. We discussed and debated the issue at three board meetings and via e-mail. We asked Citizens for Heights Schools, the community organization formed in support of the bond issue, to answer our questions.

Ultimately, FH was not unanimous in its opinions about the bond issue, and we decided not to endorse the issue as an organization.

Of 16 board members, 10 voted to endorse the issue, 4 voted not to endorse and 2 abstained.

Two who voted to endorse the issue said, “We cannot undo past mistakes or fix all problems with public education but fixing our school buildings is the most pressing need now. Our mission promotes a strong community, and public school buildings that are attractive and up to standards are essential,” and, “The health of our schools is integral to the vitality and economic development of our community, which falls within the mission of FH. This includes both educational and curricular excellence, as well as a change in perception of our schools. Sadly, this starts with the aesthetic of our facilities. FH often encourages the community to invest in itself.”

One member who voted to oppose endorsement said, “Many CH-UH citizens have invested a lot of their time and energy into the facilities plan. Irrespective of one’s thoughts about the plan particulars, the plan is a viable, realistic and credible plan. It is indisputable that the infrastructure assets of the district need to be improved. It is also indisputable that the trajectory of the education program of the district needs a comprehensive directional change. Until the district purs a comparable education plan, any support from FH should be withheld.”

Another member, said, “Although FH and the Observer are two separate entities, they are so closely linked in people’s minds that taking a stand would undermine the newspaper’s objectivity and neutrality. The issue is so important to the growth and sustainability of the Heights community, however, I believe that individual board members should submit opinion pieces to the newspaper—clearly under their own names.”

We believe that continuing constructive discourse regarding Issue 81 until Election Day is the best way FH can maintain its mission of support for the bond issue and other matters.

We do not want to compromise our long-standing tradition of impartiality and objectivity by endorsing an issue without full agreement of all board members.

We also never want to compromise the objectivity and standards of the Heights Observer, which provides a voice to all citizens.

We remain committed to maintaining and convening community conversation. This issue of the Observer contains seven pages of letters to the editor and opinion pieces on the bond issue and other matters.

Several board members have written pieces from their own perspective; some are printed in this issue, others will be published in future editions.

Our school facilities-themed Question of the Day remains online for you to state your opinion, and, we invite you to send your letters and opinions to us at www.heightsobserver.org.

We encourage you to educate yourself about the candidates and issues, and then vote on Nov 5.

Economic concerns weigh on residents considering facilities bond issue

To the Editor:

I attended the meeting on Sept. 11 about the Cleveland Heights-University Heights school district’s proposed bond issue to fund major renovation and updates of the district’s school buildings. Supporters of the bond issue made a compelling case to no longer delay this long-overdue renovation of our school buildings. It seemed, at least for the majority attending the meeting, that there was no disagreement on this point.

However, during a “sidebar” conversation with another resident outside of the actual meeting, it became clear to me that, for at least some of the citizens of the Heights, the need to rebuild and upgrade the school facilities is not the central issue. They understand and agree that the need exists. The real issue for these citizens is and will be the economic angst that will place upon the household budgets of many, including senior citizens and others on a fixed income.

The sidebar conversation produced at least one idea that the board of education should seriously consider. Retain financing the district’s capital improvements by a long-term bond issuance, the debt service on which will be paid for by a property tax levy. However, although the property tax has been the staple source for operating revenue over the years, the board does have another source of revenue that it could consider for operating costs. That source is a school district income tax. There are several good reasons to explore this option, not the least of which being that the tax could be imposed only on earned income, with the pensions and other fixed retirement income of those citizens without earned income not being subject to the tax. Additionally, the income tax is not a regressive tax, like the property tax. It would produce increased income only if, and as, wages increase over time.

I would like to hope that if the board were to commit to avoiding the use of the property tax to raise new income for operations during the time that the long-term bonds were outstanding and commit to use instead a school district income tax for this purpose, the economic angst that many citizens are experiencing around this comprehensive capital improvement plan may at least be partially abated.

LWV endorses school facilities bond issue

To the Editor:

The League of Women Voters supports the $134.8 million bond issue that the CH-UH Board of Education has placed on the November ballot. These funds will support the implementation of the first phase of a comprehensive K-12 plan, carefully developed with extensive citizen involvement.

The plan will overhaul the core operating systems and upgrade the learning environment of our school facilities to better meet educational needs for the next 50 years. The first phase will take Heights High down to its bones, replacing all operating systems with up-to-date and energy-efficient solutions, and will substantially renovate Monticello and Roxboro middle schools.

This plan fulfills important citizen responsibilities supported by two League positions:
- Provide sufficient funding for quality public education, and
- Use long-range planning for finances, facilities, staffing and educational methods along with citizen input.

We agree with the school board that the facilities are in serious need of repair and that equipment for science and technology is outdated; that the improvements in core operating systems can be made only by stripping the buildings down to their bones; that operating and environmental costs can be reduced by investing in existing buildings; that there are financial benefits to acting now; and that our students and teachers deserve learning environments that are safe, healthy, conducive to learning and comparable to their peers in the region.

The league commends the board of education for responding to voter concerns and taking more time to involve citizens and improve the facilities plan. We urge voters to support this essential improvement to educational opportunity in our community.

Beware if you are passing by this intersection

To the Editor:

There is a big patch of poison ivy at the intersection of Kenilworth and Mayfield roads, the exact address is 2551 Kenilworth Road.

Now, that might not sound like a big deal, and for many people it would not be. However, some people experience severe allergic reactions to poison ivy, and even end up in the hospital after they come into contact with it.

So, this patch should be eradicated by the city or whoever else might be responsible. That is particularly the case because this poison ivy is located adjacent to a bus stop and many people either walk or bike past that intersection every day.

Public schools are for everyone

To the Editor:

I had a hard time deciding whether to move to Cleveland Heights in 1996. A combination of factors led me to make the move. The flashes of city life I saw on Coventry reminded me of my years in Chicago, and the occasional hillside brought back pleasant childhood memories. Also interesting were the city’s claims to diversity and its strategies for maintaining racial integration. Because I don’t have children and because I had most recently lived in a place with a viable urban school system, the public schools didn’t catch my attention at first.

After living here for a while I noticed how our public schools contribute to our collective everyday life. I lived near Coventry Village at first and the presence of Coventry School struck me as the key to it seeming like a complete city in its own right. The successful commercial district is in the middle of residential neighborhoods that are remarkably diverse, both architecturally and demographically, and all these neighborhoods were represented in the student body of Coventry School.

After moving to the north end of Cleveland Heights I was disappointed to learn that the school board decided to close Coventry School, but by then I had formed positive impressions of the Cleveland Heights-University Heights City School District for other reasons. My neighbors in the north end talked about the schools in a positive way, making Cleveland Heights seem like a place they had aspired to live. I was also impressed that many of my co-workers and other city residents I knew—people with options—were confident about sending their kids to the public schools. They were both confident in the schools and committed to them.

At the same time, I had heard people write off the schools, as if the demise of the system was inevitable, and I heard others suggest the schools didn’t matter. They’d point out that only a small percentage of city households had kids in the schools, implying that once the schools were no longer viable we would be able to just go on without them. I mulled these declarations and eventually concluded that a viable community with viable public schools is impossible to achieve in an equitable manner.

A lot has changed about Cleveland Heights since I moved here. We have problems now that we only worried about having a decade ago, but we are not without strengths. I love that Cleveland Heights has always been intertwined with Cleveland itself and that it has been able to set standards for Greater Cleveland, whether by showing that urban vitality was still possible in our region or by showing that successful urban school systems were a reachable goal. I worry now that some of these assets, especially our schools, will slip through our hands if we don’t attend to them carefully.

I look forward to Susie Kaesper’s monthly columns in the Observer, where she has laid out the case for public schools as keys to the commonwealth, and I recently heard one of our city council candidates state that Cleveland Heights High School should be our most important public building. I agree. Imagine what it would say about us if the high school were returned to its original architectural grandeur and its interior upgraded to standards that could match those of the exclusive school districts. For me, it would say that the cities served by our school district are places of opportunity. It would say that we care about kids—and not just our own kids—getting a fair chance.

People are much less likely to consider our schools—and, by extension, the cities they serve—if the schools appear rundown or lacking for resources, and physical upgrades to the district’s buildings will improve their viability as places where learning can take place.

I don’t look forward to paying more in real estate taxes, but think our schools are a worthwhile and essential investment. Schools that appear well cared for are indicators of a community that is well cared for. I plan to support the bond issue on this November’s ballot and hope that you will too.

Coventry-Overlook traffic signal schedule seems a hazard

To the Editor:

In the past six months or so, it seems the traffic lights at the intersection of Coventry and Overlook roads have gone from green-yellow-red in each direction, all day and all night, to green-yellow-red in each direction during the day and flashing red on Overlook and flashing yellow (caution) on Coventry 24 hours a day.

This makes it very difficult to cross Coventry anywhere between Cedar Road and Euclid Heights Boulevard, if not really between Fairmount and Euclid Heights boulevards. At all times, except the very wee hours of the morning graveyard-shift time, it is a challenge to scoot across Coventry between cars that are coming in both directions. When going west across the intersection on Overlook, the trees on the east side of Coventry to the south of the intersection block visibility in that direction, making it hard to see if there is a car just 50 feet away.

I would love to understand why the change was made and, barring a revelation of misperception on my part, would love to see it go back to 24/7, 365-days green-yellow-red in each direction. It is a matter of time, in my opinion, before the accidents start mounting there.

How to pass the CH-UH school facilities bond issue

To the Editor:

“What will change?” This is the question the education leaders of the Cleveland Heights-University Heights City School District have to clearly and concisely answer if the facilities bond issue has any possibility of approval by the voters. The need to rehabilitate, refurbish and restructure the district’s building and infrastructure is apparent. This effort should have been initiated years ago. The leadership of the district has failed to connect the fulfillment of the facilities plan with a clearly articulated and creditable plan to improve the educational experience.
cipation program of the district. I believe that this failure puts the passage of the bond issue out of reach.

The challenge for the bond issue campaign is that the determining segment of the eligible voters is made up of those who are either opposed or ambivalent. The opposed are locked in place and most likely will not or cannot be moved to change. To be successful, it is necessary to move the currently ambivalent voters into the supporter category and get them to vote. The bond issue passage hinges on these potential supporters and voters.

It is imperative to make a compelling case for why passage of this bond issue is necessary. The campaign has to change the perception that this is just a tax and the only result will be an increase in my taxes. This perception has to be converted into recognition that this is an investment in the district’s capital assets with positive benefits and returns for all stakeholders. I want to feel good about my vote and hold the belief that my vote will engender a good result.

Successful campaigns find support by combining visceral elements and imagery with the intrinsic needs and beliefs of the voter. The 2008 Obama Hope poster is an excellent example of how this connection is made. It is my belief that my vote will engender a good result.

To the Editor:

Cleveland Heights should have a public records policy of which it can be proud. There is room for improvement.

The city’s public records policy is difficult for the average person to find on its website. One must locate the link to the codified ordinances and then run a search query.

The official public records policy appears in Chapter 105 of the Cleveland Heights Codified Ordinances. The policy is, surprisingly, only two paragraphs long. By contrast, the Model Public Records Policy suggested by the Ohio Attorney General is three pages long. That policy is well written and easy for any city to adopt as its own. Links to the both policies can be found at www.chipple-law.com.

A seven-section Cleveland Heights policy, published in 2007, ironically does not appear to be available to the public—at least nowhere on the city’s website. There is no known explanation why the 2007 policy is different from, and somewhat inconsistent with, the “official” policy that appears in the Codified Ordinances.

The time is ripe for Cleveland Heights to enact a first-class public records policy and to prominently display that policy on its website.

Schools are working well for many children

Joan Spoerl

As parents, we each have our own reasons for choosing a school. Some of these reasons are rooted in family tradition, a desire for a religious education, or access to specialized programming. Others, however, are rooted in misconceptions.

I am writing to members of our community who tell families with young children to avoid the CH-UH schools, to those who suggest we shouldn’t support our schools until “they do their job,” and to those who imply that enrolling a child in our public system is a mistake.

I am not suggesting that some complaints about children’s experiences in our schools aren’t legitimate. Nor am I suggesting that families who always planned to send their children to private or parochial school change those plans. But please understand that there are countless conscientious families, like mine, whose children are having overwhelmingly positive experiences in their neighborhood schools, and that our support of and participation in those schools is a valuable investment in the future viability of our community.

My son is entering his fourth year at Fairfax Elementary and he has benefited from the school’s hardworking, capable, committed and caring professionals. The schools succeeded for my friend’s daughter and her cohort of recent Heights High graduates who are now starting their college careers at Carnegie Mellon, Princeton, Cornell, McCallister, Denison, Case Western Reserve, to name but a few schools.

Many of us love living in this wonderfully diverse community. We may also recognize that we have not fully achieved Martin Luther King’s dream of equality. Nowhere is this more apparent than in our community’s relationship with its schools.

While our community is roughly 50 percent white and 45 percent black, our schools are 80 percent black. There are many reasons this is so, but I suspect that even in this “integrated” community, issues of race and class play a role. Even I, a white woman who did anti-racism work with my early childhood education colleagues in Chicago, taught anti-bias curriculum at the college level, and lived in integrated neighborhoods for more than 10 years of my adult life, experienced subconscious assumptions and fears about my child being in the minority at school.

Nonetheless, I opted for the public schools for a variety of reasons. My husband and I really wanted to send our child to our neighborhood school. I heard many positive first-hand stories about experiences in the public schools, and I read How to Walk to School: Blueprint For a Neighborhood School Renaissance, which reminded me that I could be a positive force in my community by working in and with the public schools, and I knew enough to question my own assumptions about race and class. While all is not perfect in our schools, I feel fortunate to be a part of the team striving for progress, if not perfection.

My son is happy, a voracious reader and learner, and largely oblivious to the issues that concern us as adults. If at some point he is unhappy in school, I’ll do all I can to work with the schools to resolve the issues.

Meanwhile, I ask community members who question the value of our public schools to care about all families and children in the community, not just their own. I ask us to tell our children: Be careful with your words; they matter. When you publicly or privately deride the performance of the schools, your students and teachers, you disparage the experience of many of your neighbors and colleagues. You disrespect the efforts of the dedicated staff, children and families who call these schools home. Every time your comments drive an engaged, committed family away from our schools, you negatively impact the education of the children who remain.

Like many here, I wish support of our schools weren’t so dependent on property taxes. Until we succeed in changing the funding formulas, however, I hope that the majority will recognize how important it is for a community to strive for high quality schools and school buildings for its youngest residents. Finally, I invite others who want to send their children to their neighborhood school to try it; you just might like it.

THE COMMON GOOD

Susie Kaeser

The school building boom in Cleveland Heights took root in 1904 when the newly incorporated village of about 1,000 residents built Lee Road School on the site of the current Boulevard Elementary School.

As the orchards and farmland of this new village started to sprout streets full of apartment buildings and one- and two-family houses, the need for more schools grew. In 1914 a high school was built next to Lee Road School. By 1960, when the population of Cleveland Heights peaked at 61,873, the school district, which by then included University Heights and a strip of South Euclid, operated 10 elementary schools, four junior high schools, the current high school at Cedar and Lee roads and an administration building.

The 2010 census put the Cleveland Heights population at 46,121, a 25-percent drop over 50 years—the effect of shrinking household size, the freeway system and the exurban development it made possible, white flight and regional population loss. In response to this, the school district now operates four fewer buildings, and a new comprehensive facilities plan calls for closing six more than only those that were closed buildings are expensive to maintain, but that does not mean we should turn them over for any purpose for however much someone is willing to pay for them.

We need a plan. We need creative thinking, thoughtful policies, and public involvement. We need to set standards and to be patient. We must remember that what gives these properties special value is that they belong to all of us. We need more than merely closing some school buildings, and reducing the size of those that remain.

The CH-UH Board of Education is to be commended for facing the reality that our school population does not merit operating all the buildings we have. Over the last three years, the board has led a look forward into uncertainty with the goal of developing a comprehensive use and rehabilitation plan for the schools that will serve us for the next 50 years. They have grappled with how to best meet our educational needs and have put forth a viable plan that needs community support.

The plan leaves unsolved an important challenge: What do we do with a treasure trove of excess publicly owned space?

I like to get rid of stuff I don’t use any more. My goal is to keep it out of the landfill. The best option is to find someone who will make good use of it. Garage sales, Easter Seals, and tree lawn scavengers are valued outlets for shedding the outdated parts of my life.

When it comes to public property, though we need to do more than shed the surplus. We need inspired solutions.

Our school buildings and the land they occupy express our interrelatedness, our commitment to the value of every citizen and our hopes for the future. Because our public property is acquired with public funds to serve the public good, we need to approach its disposition in a way that honors its special value.

Like every other first-ring community in our region, we need to address this stubborn trend. The wisdom of the planning community is needed to help us frame the criteria for deciding what kinds of disposition make sense and for identifying the purposes that could be served if we use our imaginations. The board and the authority to decide what to do, but it should not be left to figure out the choices on its own.

We have to get comfortable with some different ways of thinking: that growth is not the only measure of health, that the right use in the future is better than the wrong use now, that the community—not the real estate market or special interests—should define fair price and appropriate use, that a public purpose is desirable and could take new forms.

I don’t know what we should do, but I do know it can’t be just another real estate transaction. Our closed buildings are expensive to maintain, but that does not mean we should turn them over for any purpose for however much someone is willing to pay for them.

We need a plan. We need creative thinking, thoughtful policies, and public involvement. We need to set standards and to be patient. We must remember that what gives these properties special value is that they belong to all of us. We need more than merely closing some school buildings.

The choices we make about this precious resource should fulfill a thoughtful vision of our future. Without this kind of thoughtful approach, the decisions will be based on cutting our losses rather than enhancing our community.

Susie Kaeser is a longtime resident of Cleveland Heights, former director of Cleveland Heights, and serves on the national board of Parents for Public Schools.

OPINION

Last year, the district met eight out of 56 indicators, while this year, with the new standards, the district met seven out of 24 achievement indicators.

Factoring in the value-added data, however, shows a fuller and more positive picture. CH-UH is the only district in Cuyahoga County and one of only eight in the state of Ohio, that received As in all four value-added areas. "Gains were made in grades seven and eight in math, reading and all tests. Middle School is one of only three schools in Cuyahoga County, and one of 17 schools in the state, to receive As in all four value-added areas. Each value-added subgroup showed gains on all tests. The gifted group also had a high progress score in mathematics. Students with disabilities and students in the lowest 20 percent of achievement had high progress scores in reading.

The significant changes in state report card categories and scoring make many year-to-year comparisons difficult, if not impossible, but the scores do reflect several factors that do allow for direct comparison, and many show improvement.

In reading, proficiency ratings improved from the last school year among third, seventh, eighth, 10th and 11th grade students. In math, proficiency ratings improved among eighth- and 10th-grade students. Science scores also improved among eighth- and 11th-grade students. In social studies, scores improved among 10th- and 11th-grade students. Writing scores improved among 11th-graders. Overall, the graduation rate increased for all students, including the economically disadvantaged, African Americans and students with an Individualized Education Program (IEP).

“These results underline the fact that there remains a subset of students, approximately 30 percent of our students every year, who are performing below expectations,” said McDaniel.

“In order to improve overall, we need students to make greater gains within each school year. Many of our students are not functioning at grade level and although we are making gains with them, we need to do even more to improve their actual achievement ratings.”

“Assistant Superintendent Andrea Celico and her educational services team have begun the evaluation process of our educational programs, which will aid in determining the success and future implementation of each,” said McDaniel.

“We are heartened by the instances of improvement, and we can see in these results the clear positive outcome of several of our initiatives, especially the 3rd Grade Reading Guarantee,” concluded McDaniel.

“However, it is clear that the State of Ohio’s education system is setting communities up for undeserved disappointment. Significant drops in ratings will be seen in all districts, even in places like our district, where performance has been nearly identical to last year.”

School district scheduling of an event for parents creates obstacles
To the Editor:
I have a concern about the CH-UH school district’s poor communication about a major change to a traditional event for the 2013-14 school year.
I’m a Roshboro Elementary parent and have a full-time job. This year, the district scheduled Curriculum “Night” for 4:30 p.m. on a weekday (Monday, Aug. 26). The date and time were communicated to parents about two weeks prior to the event. This left insufficient time for me to arrange for time off from work to attend, and I was able to be there for only the last 20 minutes of the session. I have spoken to a few other working parents who encountered the same obstacle.
I contacted the representatives of my PTA and Family Connections (to convey) my displeasure at this inconvenience, and was encouraged by both to express my concerns to the district directly. I emailed the superintendent, Dr. McDaniels’s kind and prompt response offered a pleasant apology and explained that the district is “trying the earlier time on a pilot basis this school year.” I was informed that they “will survey parents and staff,” and was encouraged to provide my feedback at that time.
In my previous three years as a Roshboro parent, I have been able to attend the majority of the school’s events as they either have been presented after traditional working hours or the date was [communicated] with sufficient notice to arrange time off from work. The school encourages parental involvement and I would love to be as involved as possible. However, when the district blatantly contradicts this intention by making it difficult, if not impossible, for many of the parents to attend, it leads me to question its commitment to this endeavor.

I urge you to see for yourself. We are being asked to approve Bond Issue 81 in November so the district can completely renovate the high school and two middle schools. This visit convinced me the need is real and compelling, and worth the investment. Renovations will reduce maintenance and improve energy efficiency, saving money in the long run. Furthermore, the district can access supplemental state money now that will not be available in the future. Costs go down and the quality of learning improves—it’s a win all around.
However, when the district blatantly contradicts this intention by making it difficult, if not impossible, for many of the parents to attend, it leads me to question its commitment to this endeavor.

John Carroll to host fair trade expo on Oct. 12

Noha Bechara

What do stores like Revibe, Ten Thousand Villages, Heinens and Dave’s Markets have in common? The answer is simple—fair trade goods. Whether it is coffee, chocolate, fruits, or clothing, all of these stores sell a variety of fair trade products.

Fair trade is an alternative way of doing business, one that promotes equal and sustainable relationships between consumers and producers. This includes paying fair wages in the local communities that produce the goods, engaging in environmentally sustainable practices, and promoting healthy working conditions. These trading partnerships are based on relationships of mutual respect. Some common fair trade products include crafts, clothing, jewelry, coffee and chocolate.

Along with these stores, John Carroll University, in University Heights, has joined the fair trade movement. Not only does John Carroll provide fair trade products, such as coffee and chocolate, throughout its campus, but it is also hosting this year’s Ohio Fair Trade Expo, the largest regional fair trade event in the United States. The event is scheduled for Saturday, Oct. 12, in the Dolan Center for Science and Technology.

The fair trade movement in Northeast Ohio has been advanced by local and national retailers offering fair trade-certified products, and by the initiatives of local high schools and colleges promoting the fair trade market through education and advocacy.

“John Carroll’s fair trade initiative is rooted in the hearts of passionate students striving to make fair trade a culture on their campus,” commented McKenue Bartels, a member of John Carroll’s Fair Trade Committee.

The Oct. 12 event “will be the fourth Fair Trade Expo held in Cleveland and includes both international and national speakers, workshops on a variety of issues, a fair trade marketplace with over 25 vendors, a fashion show, a program for Girl Scouts and a program for children,” said Dritte Wilen, coordinator of the expo planning committee and a Cleveland Heights resident.

For more information about the Expo, or fair trade in general, go to www.ohiofairtrade.com.

Cleveland Heights City Council

Meeting highlights

AUGUST 19, 2013

Council Member Mary A. Dunbar was absent.

Citizen comments

Heights Bicycle Coalition: Resident Lee Reese, representing the Heights Bicycle Coalition, thanked council for its support in making the city bike-friendly and requested formation of a transportation advisory committee to coordinate efforts for pedestrians, bikes, “safe walk to school,” the needs of disabled citizens, etc. Mayor Edward Kelly noted that Mary Dunbar, council member, had already discussed this idea and it will be a topic at an October council work session.

Mayfield Road resurfacing

Council authorized an agreement with CT Consultants Inc., for construction administration and support services for the Mayfield Road Resurfacing Project, for a sum not to exceed $71,700 plus expenses. Construction administrators act as the eyes of the city on site, to ensure the quantity of materials and quality of work are correct.

Youth Advisory Commission

Council amended the ordinance establishing the Youth Advisory Commission (YAC) to add as members any high school senior who sat on the YAC the previous year and wishes to continue to participate. Applications for the coming year will be available online in September.

Vehicle sale

Council adopted procedures for the sale of 35 police department and public works department vehicles that are unneeded, obsolete, or unfit for public use. Three will be sold to East Cleveland and 32 will be sold at auction on Sept. 21, at 2881 Noble Road.

Undercover vehicles

Council authorized an agreement with the City of Cleveland to receive funds as a subrecipient from the Ohio Department of Criminal Justice Services for $30,000, to reimburse purchase of undercover vehicles to be used by the Cleveland Heights Police Department as part of the Northeast Ohio Law Enforcement Task Force.

Cain Park

Bonnie Capan, council member and vice chair of the recreation committee, praised staff for their work and the appearance of the park this summer. She said that performers love appearing at Cain Park and love the audiences. The Cain Park history exhibit that had been in the Cain Park gallery all summer will be relocated in the city hall atrium.

LWV Observer: Blanche Valley.

SEPTEMBER 3, 2013

All council members were present.

Citizen comments

Spirit Corner community garden: Resident Laura Marks thanked council for supporting the community garden at the Spirit Corner at Hampton and Cashwell roads. She also thanked Mayor Edward Kelly and Council Member Bonnie Capan, who are retiring from council at the end of the year, for their many years of service on council.

Cedar Lee SID assessment and plan

Council approved assessment legislation necessary to cover expenses relative to the Cedar Lee Special Improvement District (SID) public services plan. This legislation includes approving the report of the Assessment Equalization Board for the public services plan, implementing the five-year plan through assessment, levying the assessment, and authorizing the advancement of funds to the SID in anticipation of assessment income. The assessment, to be levied annually, totals $703,440 over a five-year period and affects 71 parcels of property in proportion to their tax values as of July 17, 2013. The advancement of funds will take place annually for the five-year period.

Lighting and improvements assessments

Council approved assessment legislation to cover a portion of the expense of street lighting and improvements. This legislation includes approval of the reports of two assessment equalization boards that heard objections to the assessments being levied. One board was for street lighting assessments; the other, for assessments for street and roadway improvements such as grading, drainage, curbing, paving, repairing, cleaning, snow removal and the planting and maintenance of trees. The legislation directs the city to proceed with the assessments to cover a portion of street lighting expense ($3,119,947.76) at an annual rate, for 2014 through 2016, of $1.02 per front foot (with reduction for corner lots), and assessments to cover a portion of street and roadway improvement expenses ($2,997,596.96) at an annual rate, for 2014 through 2016, of $0.98 per front foot (with reduction for corner lots).

Disposition of city property

Council amended the city code to specify methods, such as auction, trade-in, etc., for the disposal of surplus personal property that is no longer needed for municipal purposes. Council approval will not be required for the sale of such property valued at $23,000 or less. The previous threshold was $5,000.

Resurfacing

Council approved a change order to a contract with Konyak Paving Inc. for the 2013 street resurfacing project. The change order included the resurfacing of Crest Road ($90,000) and the Nighttown parking lot ($84,000). Taking into account an earlier change order that reduced the contract by $45,000, the net contract sum will change from the original $549,760 to $478,760.

The Mayfield Road resurfacing project begins this week. The project’s cost, $4,041,173.30, will be borne by the state and county.

The fifth annual Potter Village Block Party was held on Saturday, Aug. 24, on Castleton Road in Cleveland Heights. Potter Village, located between Monticello Boulevard and Taylor and Yellowstone roads, comprises seven connected streets—Castleton, Woodridge, St. Albans, Boynton, Radcliffe, Haselton and Edison.

The neighborhood is named after the Potter family, who ran a large dairy farm on the property in the early 1900s. Horace and Florence Potter were jewelers. They both graduated from the Cleveland Institute of Art in 1898. They began making jewelry in their chicken coop and later established a jewelry store in downtown Cleveland.

In 1921, the Potters employed jeweler Louis Mellen in their shop, and incorporated the Potter Studio three years later in 1924. In 1928, the Potters opened a store at 10405 Carnegie Ave., which continued to operate in that location until 2004. Mellen, who managed the store, became a partner in Potter & Mellen, which was well-known throughout Cleveland for fine jewelry, silverware, artwork, china and glassware.

The Potters sold their farm in 1923 and the property was then developed into a residential neighborhood. This year, residents celebrate the neighborhood’s 90th anniversary.

Activities at the Potter Village Block Party included rock ‘n’ roll by the David Loy Band; a potluck dinner; a visit by a Cleveland Heights fire truck and firefighters; a water balloon toss and card games; arts and crafts; an old-fashioned cake walk; and a raffle, with prizes donated by more than a dozen local merchants. More than 150 residents attended. According to the leaders of the Potter Village Good Neighbor Association, an organization of residents, it is the largest citizen-run block party in Cleveland Heights.

Move to Amend initiative Issue 32 to appear on November ballot

Greg Coleridge

Cleveland Heights voters will decide on Nov. 5 whether their city will take a stand against a controversial ruling by the U.S. Supreme Court that corporations are people and money is speech, thanks to a citizens’ initiative supported by nearly 3,500 signatures that was allowed onto the ballot by Cleveland Heights City Council by a unanimous vote on Aug. 5.

If approved by voters, the initiative, Issue 32, will establish an annual public hearing to examine the impact of big money in politics on our democracy. Following the hearing, the clerk of council will write letters to federal and state representatives summarizing the hearing and informing them that the citizens of Cleveland Heights has voted for a Constitutional Amendment declaring that only human beings possess Constitutional rights and money is not equivalent to political speech. The full text of the citizens’ initiative may be found at http://movetoamend.org/cleveland-heights/mta-circulate-initiative-

Members of the group Cleveland Heights Move to Amend collected the signatures on petitions in support of the initiative and submitted them to the city in July. As requested by the group, city council placed the initiative on the ballot rather than simply adopting it as an ordinance.

Voters in Brecksville and Northfield Heights passed similar ballot measures last November, while voters in Defiance will consider one this November and Mentor voters may do so next year. Other Ohio cities, including Athens, Oberlin, Fremont and Barberton, have enacted Move to Amend resolutions by city council vote rather than by ballot initiative, and Lakewood will consider adopting a similar resolution this month.

Supporters of Move to Amend contend that the 2010 Supreme Court ruling in Citizens United v. FEC expanded never-intended constitutional rights for corporations and resulted in record sums of spending on political advertising by corporations and wealthy individuals in 2012 through largely anonymous SuperPACs and 501 (c)4 tax-exempt organizations.

“Using the power of the Constitution, corporations override local ordinances to place cell towers, big box stores, and hydro-fracking installations pretty much where they please,” said Carla Rautenberg, Cleveland Heights Move to Amend member. “We all know that the doctrine of money as protected free speech has corrupted our national politics. So this issue is vital at the local, state and federal levels of government.”

Cleveland Heights Move to Amend (http://movetoamend.org) is affiliated with the national Move to Amend campaign (http://movetoamend.org), formed in response to the Citizens United decision, which has sponsored hundreds of Move to Amend initiatives and resolutions around the country.

LWV forum explores facilities bond issue 81

Alastair Pearson

At the crowded League of Women Voters (LWV) community forum on Sept. 11, regarding the proposed $134.8 million bond issue, heated debate focused on the expense of the plan and rising property tax rates in the Cleveland Heights-University Heights City School District. Voters will vote yes or no on the bond issue on Nov. 5.

After the official debate in the Lee Road Library meeting room concluded, the Cleveland Heights chapter of LWV voted to support the bond issue.

Two speakers—Patrick Mullen, representing Citizens for Heights Schools, and Nancy Peppler, vice president of the CH-UH school board—spoke on behalf of the $134.8 million bond issue, which would fund the facilities plan developed by the Lay Facilities Committee (LFC), which was chaired by Mullen.

Two other speakers—Albert Oberst, representing the Citizens Finance Oversight Committee, and Diane Hallum, chair of Citizens Leadership—spoke against the bond issue. Hallum said she supported Heights schools, but was opposed to the plan that would be funded by the bond issue. Mullen, also executive director of education advocacy group Reaching Heights, said that the bond issue deserved community support. “The need is urgent, the time is now, and the plan is sound,” he said.

Mullen said that the bond issue, which would provide funding for the first of two phases of building renovations envisioned by the LFC, would reduce the number of buildings to cut down maintenance costs.

“We want to go from 11 buildings to eight,” Mullen said. “We can lose buildings piecemeal, or we can do it as part of a comprehensive plan.”

Peppler said that repairs to the high school and middle schools were overdue. “We have not had a major renovation and building program in this community for 40 years,” she said.

Peppler noted that the Cleveland Heights High School campus was of particular concern. “The core of our building was built in 1925 and has been added onto seven times,” Peppler said. “We continue to put Band-Aids on this problem.”

“I hear too often the refrain that our schools are terrible and do not deserve more investment,” Peppler said. “Might a teacher feel more inspired if his room wasn’t freezing or sweltering?”

Mullen drew an analogy between the renovation of the Lee Road Library in 2006 and the proposed renovations. “We made an investment, we put the passion into doing it right,” Mullen said. “We did it for our library, we did it for our schools.”

Hallum said, “The thing I see is this focus on bells and whistles. The focus on the high school and middle schools is also very questionable.”

Phase One of the bond issue would focus on renovations to the high school and middle schools, and would be backed by the $134.8 million bond if the Nov. 5 ballot issue passes, as well as an $8.75 million loan and $3.8 million from other funding sources.

The total cost for Phase Two, which could begin five to seven years later, would be around $80.7 million. Oberst said he did not believe that two bond issues were financially advisable.

“$321 million is, I think, a little bit too much,” he said.

Oberst wore an American flag tie, and said that his clothing represented his attitude towards the bond levy.

“This is Patriot’s Day,” Oberst said. “We’ll need a lot of patriots to defeat this outrageous levy.”

Hallum said she objected to the composition of the “hand-picked” LFC, which she said was composed of “friends and peers” of the school board members.

She also said that a poll conducted by the LFC had received a disproportionate number of responses from school board employees who distorted the results.

Hallum said that the Lakewood City School District had accomplished identical repairs for $71 million less than Cleveland Heights.

Community activist Garry Kanter, who said he was her source for the information and had received the statistics from a Lakewood district employee, later acknowledged that the information was inaccurate although he had received it in “good faith.”

Ron Register, school board president and a supporter of the bond issue, said that the factual disputes that characterized the debate were not surprising.

“Information don’t matter, right,” Register said. “It’s the position people are making.”

Alastair Pearson, a Cleveland Heights resident, is a student at Saint Ignatius, where he edits the school newspaper and literary magazine. He is a contributor to the Heights Observer.

Phoenix spent the last several months redesigning the new space. “It’s part of a re-branding of Phoenix,” Feran said.

“We have a new logo, a different color scheme and a clean look,” Feran explained. “The new shop is a lot more clean, there’s less noise, and it’s more focused. It’s completely different from the old shop. It’s on the street level, so there are no stairs, and it doesn’t have the fireplace in the middle, like the old one.”

In an effort to put an emphasis on sustainability, the wall on the south side of the new shop is covered in reclaimed wood. In addition, the new shop features a counter that faces the street, where customers can sit, enjoy their coffee and watch the passers-by.

The City of Cleveland Heights helped finance the move, giving Phoenix a $50,000 loan to help cover the construction.

Cleveland Heights has been very good to Phoenix over the years,” Feran said, “and two of our three shops are located in the city.” The other Cleveland Heights Phoenix is at 2287 Lee Road.

The new Phoenix will continue to hold open-mic sessions with local musician Charlie Mosbrook on Monday nights. Mosbrook is also excited by the new location, saying that it is a more open space that will be better for his weekly sessions.

In addition, Phoenix is considering extending its hours at the new shop. “We may stay open until midnight or later,” Feran said. “A lot of the area college students use it as a study space, so we may keep it open even later than midnight during finals weeks and at other times.”

Phoenix’s old location is still available for rent, as is the former Burgers ‘n’ Beer restaurant, which was located above the old Phoenix and which closed earlier this summer. It’s not known what will replace either business.

James Bont, a Cleveland Heights resident, was a writer and editor at Rolling Stone magazine for 15 years. He is also the author of several books, including biographies of Jim Morrison, John Lennon and Bob Marley.

How to prepare for heating season

Wesley Walker

Heating season is upon us, and it’s time to get ready for the inevitable. A great place to start is with a yearly “Clean and Tune” by a certified heating professional. Not only should this process include a check of the proper operation of your furnace or boiler, but the technician should address the tuning part, as well.

Think of your car. Would you drive it all year without getting a tuneup? Why, then, would you consider running your heating unit all season without making sure it is operating efficiently? Both your car and furnace are combustion appliances, both burn a fossil fuel, and both can be more expensive to operate if they are out of tune.

You can go outside right now and check the operation of your car by simply turning the key. Did it start? If so, the starter, fuel injectors and spark plugs are working. When you put it into drive, did it move forward? Then the car is operating as expected. Your technician performs similar tests on your furnace, checking that it fires up and begins to produce heat. Then you turn up the thermostat—to determine that it is operating as expected.

Most yearly checkups will include some basic maintenance. The burners generally require yearly cleaning inside and out to remove the dust that accumulates over the summer months. The blower should be cleaned to ensure proper air flow, and the draft or exhaust should be checked under worst-case conditions to ensure the proper removal of combustion products from the home.

A furnace tuneup, however, should be more detailed than that. Just as your car may require pre- and post-testing with an E-Check to examine the exhaust for its chemical components, the heating technician should measure and test the operation of your heating system, so problems can be identified and corrected. This kind of testing is called combustion analysis. It can identify inefficient burning, the production of too much carbon monoxide and other problems.

Just as important, the technician should verify Steady State Efficiency (SSE). It is imperative that your heating unit be tuned and verified to operate at peak performance, especially if you went to the trouble and expense of installing a high-efficiency furnace. I have tested many furnaces designed to be 80 or 90 percent efficient that were actually running well below that level. This costs you money in fuel consumption, just like a car that doesn’t get the mileage it used to.

Despite our best efforts, furnaces break and fail for many different reasons, and sometimes maintenance is no longer enough. If your furnace shuts down, not only will you and your family be dealing with cold temperatures, but damage to your home can occur.

When it’s time for a new heating system, Home Repair Resource Center (HRRC) is your home maintenance partner. We have contractor evaluations and suggested repair specifications that can help you get more detailed bids, regardless of income and location. For low- and moderate-income residents of Cleveland Heights, HRRC offers grant and financial assistance that can help you make a new furnace or boiler affordable. For more information, visit www.hrcc.org or call 216-581-6400, ext. 12.

Local author to deliver keynote at next Heights Holistic Fair

Bob Rosenbaum

Warren Grossman, a well-known author and speaker who lives in Shaker Heights, will present a talk titled “Healing is Natural” at the upcoming Heights Holistic Fair. The fair, the third in a series this year, will be held Oct. 12 and 13 at the Open Office Community Space, located in the former Coventry School building at 2849 Washington Blvd. in Cleveland Heights. Hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. both days.

Grossman, author of To Be Healed by the Earth and Earth/Heart, will discuss tools found in nature for healthier, happier living. He will also lead an interactive workshop, “Strong, Pain-Free Feet,” sharing methods for relieving foot pain and building a strong foundation to support the body.

A gentle yoga class will follow the workshop, helping people at all levels of ability—including beginners—to achieve proper alignment in their poses. The two-day fair will feature other speakers, as well.

The holistic fair, co-organized by Cleveland Heights resident Judith Eugene and Pat Uhr of Lakewood, will offer products, services and information on healthy-living options for all ages. Vendors will have products for sale and will provide sample healing treatments. Psychic mediums will be on hand to give personal readings, for a small fee.

Musicians will perform, and children’s activities will include all-ages drum circles, child-oriented yoga classes, and a tambourine-making project. An all-ages play area will feature toys from Big Fun. Eugene said, “We want to reach out to the community to provide information on healthy living for all ages—kids, parents and grandparents—and have a lot of fun in the process.”

Tommy's Restaurant will donate food for sale at the fair. Proceeds from food sales are donated to the Heights Libraries. The fair is sponsored by FutureHeights, the local nonprofit that publishes the Heights Observer, and promotes a vibrant and sustainable future for Cleveland Heights and University Heights.

Admission is $5 per day and includes all activities and speakers. Admission is free for children under 12.

The Heights Holistic Fair is presented jointly by Eugene’s Loving Hands Yoga and Reiki, and Uhr’s Harmonic Journeys. For a schedule of activities and speakers visit www.holisticfaircleveland.com or call Judith Eugene at 216-408-5978.

Lake Erie Ink dives into third year

Melissa DeWater

Lake Erie Ink, a writing space for youth, has started fall programming with the third year of the Ink Spot, an after-school program that provides homework help and creative writing opportunities to kids in grades 4–8. Already, students have begun taking advantage of the opportunity to creatively express themselves. At recent Ink Spot session, students were prompted to write about the stories their shoes would tell.

If My Shoes Could Talk
by Anthony, 5th grade

If my shoes could talk, they would say:
Tear up the carpet,
And take me away.
My owner always takes
Me or maybe be
Tear me up.
Go to places shoes should never go.

The Ink Spot meets Monday through Thursday from 3–5:30 p.m. To enroll your child call 216-932-4577 or visit www.lakeerien.org.

Programs for teens include Evening Ink writing workshops and Teen Open Mic. Evening Ink welcomes students in grades 6–12, with workshops that focus on poetry, creative nonfiction, short fiction, National Novel Writing Month (NaNoWriMo) and more. Evening Ink runs Tuesday evenings, 7–8:30 p.m. Teen Open Mics are held on Saturday evenings, with the next one scheduled for Oct. 19, 7–9 p.m.

Lake Erie Ink will also offer a Scenarios USA workshop this fall. Teens will discuss and write about social issues, creating stories to submit to the Real Deal screenplay contest in December. For more information, visit www.scenariosusa.org.

Heights Youth Theatre presents ‘Willy Wonka’

Mary Patton

Heights Youth Theatre (HYTE) kicks off its 2013–14 season as Roald Dahl’s deliciously dark tale of young Charlie Bucket and the mysterious confectioner, Willy Wonka, comes to life in a new musical.

When Charlie wins a golden ticket to the weird and wonderful Wonka Chocolate Factory, it’s the chance of a lifetime to feast on the sweets he’s always dreamed of. Astonishment lies beyond the gates, as down the sugary corridors and amongst the incredible edible delights, the five lucky winners discover not everything is as sweet as it seems. A chocolate garden, an army of squirrels and the peculiar Oompa-Loompas must be believed to be seen in this spectacular new musical.

Directed by Pierre-Jacques Brault, with music directed by Joanna Li, HYTE’s “Willy Wonka” features a talented cast of local students in grades 1–12, and professional musicians playing the lyrical score. Lead cast members include Alex Boyd (Willy Wonka), Jared Shapiro (Charlie), Gus Mahoney (Candy Man), Corey Grubard (Phineous Trout), Thomas Weil (Mr. Bucket), Sara Fedor (Mrs. Bucket), Matthew McAllister (Grandpa Joe), Lucas Spencer (Augustus Gloop), Cassandra Knaggs (Mrs. Gloop), Kevin LaMonica (Mike Teavee), Sydney Fieseler (Mrs. Teavee), Emily Kemville (Veruca Salt), Aiden McKean (Mr. Sal), Kayla Black (Violet Beaugard), and Christina Ciofani (Mrs. Beauregarde).

All performances will be in the Wiley Middle School Auditorium, 2181 Middle recruiting in University Heights. Show dates are Saturday, Oct. 19 at 7 p.m.; Sunday, Oct. 20 at 2 p.m.; Friday, Oct. 25 at 7 p.m.; Saturday, Oct. 26 at 7 p.m.; and Sunday, Nov. 3 at 2 p.m.

Tickets are $10 for general admission and $9 for seniors and children under six (cash or checks only). The box office opens 45 minutes prior to each show. Call Ellen at 216-780-2235 for tickets and group seating information. For more details, visit www.heightsyouththeatre.org.

Stroke: recognizing the symptoms and providing aftercare

Judith Eugene

A stroke occurs when blood flow to the brain is interrupted after a blood vessel breaks or a blood clot blocks an artery. When this happens, brain cells begin to die and brain damage occurs. According to the National Stroke Association, when brain cells die during a stroke, abilities controlled by that area of the brain are lost. These abilities might include speech, movement and memory. How a stroke patient is affected depends on where the stroke occurs in the brain and how much the brain is damaged.

The Mayo Clinic lists several symptoms to watch for that may indicate that someone is having a stroke:

• Trouble walking, dizziness, or loss of coordination
• Confusion, or trouble speaking or understanding
• Numbness or paralysis of the face, arm or leg
• Blurred, blackened or double vision
• Trouble walking, dizziness, or loss of balance

If you notice any of these symptoms to watch for that may indicate that someone is having a stroke:

- T RUBLE WALKING, DIZZINESS, OR LOSS OF COORDINATION
- CONFUSION, OR TROUBLE SPEAKING OR UNDERSTANDING
- NUMBNESS OR PARALYSIS OF THE FACE, ARM OR LEG
- BLURRED, BLACKENED OR DOUBLE VISION
- TROUBLE WALKING, DIZZINESS, OR LOSS OF BALANCE

If someone you love has a stroke, it is important to understand that stroke rehabilitation cannot reverse the effects of a stroke; it simply helps the individual return to independent living as much as possible. This can place a strain on the stroke victim's personal relationships. According to Today's Caregiver magazine, "Caring for a stroke survivor can be emotionally, mentally and physically stressful."

Caregivers will need to be prepared to help the person get the mobility equipment they need, assist with bathing and other personal care needs, help with cooking, and perhaps help manage the person's finances.

Caregivers can support their loved one and encourage small accomplishments, which mean a lot to someone who has to relearn a once-mastered skill," said Janie Rosman, staff writer for Today's Caregiver.

Fortunately there are some things that can be done to prevent the risk of stroke. The Neurological Institute at University Hospitals Richmond Medical Center identifies these factors as contributing to the risk of stroke: high blood pressure, high cholesterol, sedentary lifestyle, obesity and smoking. Controlling these factors may help reduce the risk of stroke.

The National Stroke Association can be reached at 800-778-6137, the University Hospitals Richmond Medical Center can be reached at 440-856-6137, and the website for Today's Caregiver is www.caregiver.com.

Judith Eugene is a native of Cleveland Heights who provides classes and activities for senior adults and those with physical and mental challenges. She can be reached at 216-408-3578 or Judith@LovingHands-Groups.com.

Senior Citizen Happenings

Senior Citizen Happenings, sponsored by the City of University Heights, are open to all. Events take place on Thursdays at 2 p.m. at the University Heights Library. For information, and to suggest program topics, contact the UH Office for Senior Services at 216-970-0336 or info@universityheights.com.

Oct. 3: Robert Varley, president of the Cuyahoga County Public Library Board of Trustees, celebrates the library's 90th anniversary and the service it provides to 620,000 county residents.

Oct. 10: Kenneth Balko, Notre Dame College philosophy professor, will lead a thought-provoking analysis of contemporary issues through the lens of a classic of literature, The Scarlet Letter by Nathaniel Hawthorne.

Oct. 17: Connie Rechis, volunteer ambassador for Ten Thousand Villages in Cleveland Heights, discusses how that fair-trade organization gives economic power to small-scale farmers, artisans and entrepreneurs involved in producing items such as coconut oil (Sri Lanka), indigenous cosmetics (Togo West Africa) and cocoa bean saplings (Peruvian rainforest).

Oct. 24: Rachel DeGolia, executive director of the nonprofit Universal Health Care Action Network, will describe the grassroots organization's efforts to advocate for affordable, accessible, quality health care since March 2010, when President Obama signed the Affordable Care Act into law.

Oct. 31: Steven Taylor, the recently retired former director of Cleveland Metroparks Zoo, is back again this month with a presentation about the history, development and relevance of the zoo.

“We love having the Orchestra and the Art Museum in our back yard now!” —Beth Bohn, Judson Park resident since 2006

Beth Bohn is part of a growing trend at Judson—she and her husband Earl moved to Judson Park from the west side of Cleveland.

“We love having the Cleveland Orchestra and the Art Museum in our back yard now!” says Beth. “Plus, it’s great being close to the world-class healthcare of Cleveland Clinic and University Hospitals.”

Beth shares her life long passion for art as co-chair of the Howson Gallery, booking local artists for shows open to the public. “The gallery has built a strong reputation. Artists want to show their work here,” she notes. “People look forward to the shows.”

Judson Park’s distinct personality, which marries the best of Cleveland Heights with University Circle, appealed to Beth. “There’s a special mix of people here and it’s easy to make friends” she says. “I believe a good life includes strong bonds with friends.”

This is Smart Living™ defined at Judson Park. Interested in learning more? Call (216) 791-2004 to arrange for a tour today.

CHHS to host Oct. 16 bond issue discussion and additional tours

Angie Shaker

Heights High will host a second building tour and information session to ensure that residents have multiple chances to learn about the building’s condition, discuss plans and funding for the first phase of the proposed comprehensive School Facilities Plan, and ask any questions they may have.

The CH-UH Board of Education placed a bond issue, Issue 81, on the Nov. 5 ballot to fund the first phase of facility renovations. The second tour and information session is scheduled for Wednesday, Oct. 16 from 6:30–8:30 p.m.

The School Facilities Plan is the result of more than three years of dialogue and planning by community members, the Board of Education, district administrators and teachers. The first phase of the plan would completely renovate Cleveland Heights High School, and Monticello and Roxboro middle schools.

For anyone unable to attend the tour on Oct. 16, private tours of Heights High will be offered Thursdays at 6:30 a.m. and Mondays, Tuesdays and Wednesdays at 6 p.m. To sign up for a tour, contact Joy Henderson at j_henderson@chhs.org or 216-320-3052.

Angie Shaker is director of communications for Cleveland Heights-University Heights City School District.

Cleveland Heights-University Heights School Board

Meeting highlights

AUGUST 20, 2013

All board members were present.

Physical education waiver

After discussion, the board approved the physical education waiver pertaining to Heights High students participating in sports.

Facilities contract structure

Stephen Shergalis, business director, two people from Regency Construction, and two from the Ohio Facilities Construction Commission presented four different ways the school district can contract for the proposed facilities. They are:

• Multi-prime: the school district handles the design, bids, and build—bidding out contractors.
• Single-prime: a general contractor is hired who bids all the subcontracts.
• Construction manager-at-risk: the construction manager gives a guaranteed price and selects the contractors.
• Design build: the design builder develops the design and construction contracts.

After much discussion, board members requested more information on the four models. Shergalis would like to issue a request for qualifications now so that the board will be ready to make a decision on the approach to contracting when the bond issue passes.

Millikin property

Ron Register, board president, read a list of events regarding the Millikin property. The last offer from Mosdos was to buy the property for $215,000. The appraisals requested in 2012 by the school district and Mosdos were $770,000 and $600,000, respectively. The board directed the administration to enter into negotiations with Mosdos for purchase of the property.

LWV Observer: Adele Cohn.

SEPTEMBER 3, 2013

All board members were present.

School facilities plans

Stephen Shergalis, director of business services, explained the four models for contracting to build new facilities:

• Multi-prime: The districts hires architects, conducts competitive bidding, and holds all the risks concerning going over the budget. This is a traditional system that has been used for most school building and takes more time.
• Single-prime: One general contractor is hired who then subcontracts other pieces of the project.
• Construction manager-at-risk: the construction manager sets a price and carries the risks and might be likely to stay within budget and ensure quality work. An architect works with the construction manager to establish a guaranteed maximum price and select contractors based on cost and qualifications. The board has input on the subcontracts hired. Project startup is faster than for the multi-prime model.
• Design build: An architect is hired who then hires design builders. This is a new process, and the district and community may have less input.

After discussion, the board favored the construction manager-at-risk option. They will hire an architect whose fee would be contigent on the bond issue passing. Kal Zucker, board member, extensively researched the four approaches and explained that other school systems do not recommend the multiple-prime model because it takes longer. The construction manager-at-risk model seems to be recommended by other systems.

Staggered school opening

During the public address portion of the meeting, the Canterbury PTA president explained that this year’s staggered school opening schedule was inconvenient for working parents and should be reconsidered for next year. Later in the meeting, Andrea Calcatto, assistant superintendent, gave an update on school opening and said that she’d received positive responses concerning the staggered schedule.

Positive behavior

There was a second reading of the positive behavior intervention and support with limited use of restraint and seclusion policy. Jeffrey Johnaton, director of student services, explained that positive behavior is a major component of the Tiger Nation process. In the elementary and middle schools, five steps are promoted to achieve positive behavior:

• Post the Tiger pledge with clear expectations in all buildings.
• Review the Tiger pledge throughout the school year.
• Recite the Tiger pledge every morning.
• Develop an incentive program called Tiger Paws to reinforce good deeds and behavior.
• Implement Tiger Nation Fridays to reinforce good behavior.

Surveys of students and teachers were being conducted to see if this system is working. Positive comments and the reduction of behavioral problems suggest that it is making a difference.

Student ID policies are different in that the Tiger Nation pledge and Tiger Paws are not emphasized. Spreading school spirit and attending to climate elements are emphasized. Student IDs are worn, and student leadership is encouraged to control bullying problems. One student group made a video on school bullying. The staff receives inservice training on how to consistently enforce school policies. Consistent restraint policies used by many other districts are in place. The district hopes these will be minimally used, given the behavior policies. The staff has had conversation training to limit restraint events.

Public forums

The League of Women Voters will hold a public forum on the school facilities bond issue on Sept. 11 at the Lee Road Library and a Candidates Night at the Cleveland Heights Community Center on Oct. 8.

Beaumont seniors semifinalists in 2014 National Merit Scholarship program

The initial screen of program entrants is the 2012 Preliminary SAT/NMSQT test. About 1.5 million juniors in more than 22,000 high schools take this test.

A semifinalist must have an outstanding academic record throughout high school, be endorsed and recommended by a high school official, write an essay, and earn SAT scores that confirm the student’s earlier performance on the qualifying test.

Beaumont School seniors Delaney Clark and Bailey Swartz have been named semifinalists in the 2014 National Merit Scholarship competition.

Officials of the National Merit Scholarship Corporation (NMSC) announced the names of approximately 16,000 semifinalists in the 59th annual National Merit Scholarship program.

These academically talented high school seniors have an opportunity to compete for some $35 million in scholarships worth about $35 million that will be offered next spring.

On Wednesday, Oct. 2, the Sustainable Heights Network (SHN) will host a free tour of Heights High and an after-tour community networking event at the Wine Spot on Lee Road. The purpose of the event is to provide voters the opportunity to walk through the high school and learn about the building’s current condition, and to discuss proposed facilities upgrades that include reaching LEED silver, and possibly gold, standard if Issue 8 passes.

The networking event at the Wine Spot is an opportunity for participants to share information and connect with local resources, including Chuck Miller of Doty and Miller Architects; Sam Doty, University Heights, Cleveland Heights; and Meade and Hamilton.

The building was built in 1912 and has been used as a manse for the minister. It was designed by the prestigious architectural firm of Meade and Hamilton. It has 8 bedrooms and 5 bathrooms, is approx. 6,500 square feet and includes an oak and Spanish plaster finished 2,661 square foot first floor, a 2,997 square foot similarly finished second floor, and a 150 square foot third floor ballroom.

A report documenting the condition of the building prepared by the Cleveland Restoration Society is available for review.

Interested parties are invited to submit a proposal. The 2765 Task Force of the Session Fairmont Presbyterian Church will review all submissions. Additional information may be requested.

Depending on the proposed re-use of the building and its ultimate destination, Fairmount Presbyterian Church may make a cash contribution towards purchaser costs to complete the project.

The building may be toured by appointment. Copies of all reports commissioned by the Task Force in connection with the Building will be available for review at that time. Please contact Lee Chilcote at (216) 795-4117 to set an appointment.

A complete copy of Request for Proposal, is available at the Fairmont Presbyterian Church website via the QR code at right or the shortened URL: http://goo.gl/Hd7b.

Proposals must be submitted no later than 5 p.m. on Monday, Oct. 14, 2013.
Heights High tour shows facilities that bond issue would renovate

Patti Carlyle

More than 120 people attended the community open house and tour at Cleveland Heights High School on Sept. 10. Guides offered a brief history of the facilities improvement process, including the first phase of a proposed renovation plan, which is part of Bond Issue 81 that will appear on the Nov. 5 election ballot.

The tour of the school, originally built in 1925, showed participants areas needing improvements to bring the building into compliance with state requirements. It began outdoors at the clock tower, which is in need of renovations that would cost $200,000 to complete.

Next was the Cedar Road science wing, built in 1959, which includes science classrooms that do not meet state minimum standards. Lab tables occupy the majority of space, crowding the desk area. Per state safety standards, labs and lecture space are to be in separate areas.

A comprehensive upgrade to the electrical system has been recommended. Tour guests saw rows of exposed conduit in classroom walls and in basement runnels designed for maintenance access, but now used for gym classes and track team practice. The tunnels and the girls’ locker room had evidence of standing water.

The school swimming pool is too shallow for diving and too small for competition, forcing the diving team to practice at Cleveland State University. Plans for a new pool have drawn criticism, as a pool is outside state criteria for a multi-use space. Part of the proposed improvement plan includes improved community access to the pool, an entrance compliant with the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA), family locker rooms and better noise control.

ADA compliance is a challenge throughout the school. The building has 15 distinct floor levels joined by various ramps and stairs, and there is no single elevator reaching every floor. With 70 separate roof levels, maintaining the school’s roof system is difficult and expensive.

The heating, ventilation and air conditioning system received a lot of attention, as indoor temperatures neared 90 degrees that day. The winter brings similar discomfort, with students often wearing coats and gloves to class. Steam traps for aging boilers must be changed at least every two years, costing nearly $100,000 districtwide.

Larger, renovated classrooms in the Legacy New Tech School approach modern standards, but there are no sprinklers. The automotive technology area has sprinklers, and emergency wash stations exist in some science labs, but there is no fire suppression system for the whole building.

A highlight was a visit to the recently restored auditorium, which also has its challenges. Noisy air conditioning units must be turned off during performances. The auditorium lacks an orchestra pit and amenities, such as green rooms and storage space.

If passed, Bond Issue 81 would fund the first phase of a community-created comprehensive facilities plan. The first phase will renovate Cleveland Heights High School and Monticello and Roxboro middle schools over a five-year period.

Tours are offered every Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at 6 p.m. and Thursdays at 9:30 a.m., until Election Day. Contact Joy Henderson at j.henderson@chuh.org to schedule a tour.

Programs at Heights Libraries focus on Islamic culture

Sheryl Banks

Earlier this year, the National Endowment for the Humanities awarded the Cleveland Heights-University Heights Public Library the Muslim Journeys Bookshelf—a collection of books, films, and other resources designed to introduce the American public to the complex history and rich culture of Muslims in the United States and throughout the world. The materials are available at all four Heights Libraries branches.

Heights Libraries has also designed a special series of fall programs celebrating the collection, called Bridging Cultures. Muslims Journeys. Sam Lapides, Heights Libraries special projects coordinator, said, “These programs give our community the opportunity to learn about different aspects of the Muslim experience and culture, including literature, poetry, history, and art.”

Library story time at new times and some with a musical twist

Julia Murphy

Despite being eight months pregnant, Mary Susan Delagrange, youth services associate, navigates the Little Door of the Lee Road Library children’s story time room. She then leads the children in an enthusiastic welcome song. Clapping, squealing, laughing and even shushing are contagious here. Young bodies inch closer to her knees as she reads.

This is Story Stop, an interactive story time that encourages early literacy, now with new times to better fit the needs of the community. The Story Stop schedule is:
- Lee Road Library
  Mondays: 10 a.m. and 11 a.m., Tuesdays: 11 a.m.
- Coventry Village and University Heights Libraries
  Wednesdays: 10:30 a.m.
- Noble Neighborhood Library
  Fridays: 10:30 a.m.

On Oct. 11, Lauren Saeger, youth services librarian, will begin a new program called Kids in Harmony at the Lee Road Library, at 10:30 a.m.

The program will emphasize music-related activities and incorporate music into the stories that are read.

The goal is to help children understand the concept of a consistent rhythm and to practice pitch matching. Rather than learning to read a musical score and then translate it into musical notes, this method uses listening and repeating, which is how children learn to speak.

“Our don’t read and then talk, so it doesn’t make sense to teach music that way either,” Saeger said. Kids in Harmony will welcome preschoolers, toddlers and even babies.

Heights Libraries is increasing its focus on story time for young children. Look forward to more changes this fall and make it a part of your family’s routine.

Julia Murphy is the marketing assistant at the Cleveland Heights-University Heights Public Library.

Library Friends announce busy autumn season

Louise Oliver

Friends of Heights Libraries is preparing for a busy fall season, and invites you to participate.

Hear Laura Taxel, co-author of Cleveland’s West Side Market: 100 Years & Still Cooking, at the Friends annual meeting on Sunday, Oct. 20 at 2 p.m. Taxel’s entertaining narrative includes stories gathered from those who worked at the market. Vintage and contemporary photographs provide a vivid and visual portrait of this Cleveland landmark. The book—a great holiday gift—will be available for sale and signing at the annual meeting.

The Friends fall Mega Book Sale kicks off on Friday, Nov. 1. On Friday and Saturday, fill a grocery bag for only $5. A huge selection of books, in all categories, will be displayed and continually replenished. In addition, Vaseboxoe Gallery is offering prints for only $5 each, along with special finds at bargain prices. Items that remain on Sunday, Nov. 3, will be available for only $1 a bag. Mark your calendar for this event—you won’t want to miss it.

You can get a jump on your holiday shopping, and support the Friends at the same time, by visiting Barnes & Noble at Eton on Chagrin Boulevard between Nov 9 and 15. Mention Friends of Heights Libraries, and 10 percent of your purchase will be donated to the organization. Heights Arts presents Close Encounters, chamber music as it’s meant to be heard

Rachel Bernstein

Heights Arts presents its eighth season of Close Encounters chamber music concerts performed by world-class musicians who live right here in Northeast Ohio and Cleveland Heights.

Isabel Trautwein, Cleveland Orchestra violinist and Close Encounters artistic director, collaborates with her colleagues and other professional musicians to perform programs of their choice in unique venues.

The new season continues Heights Arts’ tradition of providing excellent chamber music to the public. Many music fans have enjoyed hearing most of these musicians for years at Cleveland Orchestra concerts; hearing them up close and personal, only feet away from the audience, is a completely different and intimate experience.

The series begins on Oct. 27; venues to be announced. Reserve tickets at 216-371-3477 or www.heightsarts.org.

Omni in the Clouds, Sunday, Oct. 27, 3 p.m.

The Omni String Quartet (accompanied by a concert pianist), always sells out and amazes audiences. On the program is a pair of masterpieces tracing a thread of music history. Mendelssohn’s quartet, Opus 13, written by the boy composer in 1827, was deeply influenced by Beethoven’s Opus 182, completed in 1825 at the end of the composer’s life.

This pairing embodies fascinating connections between the old master and the extraordinary young talent. Omni will perform in a downtown loft, an ultra-modern space with panoramic views of downtown and Lake Erie, near Public Square. (Fully elevator accessible.)

Mary Lynch: Strings Attached, Sunday, Feb. 9, 3 p.m.

Meet Mary Lynch, the young new second oboe chair in the Cleveland Orchestra. Trained at Juilliard and selected to perform at the prestigious Marlboro Music Festival, Lynch has chosen an eclectic chamber music program for oboe and strings, including a rarely heard lyrical oboe quintet by William Bolcom, one of America’s contemporary master composers.

Amici Quartet: Beethoven’s Famous Last Works, Sunday, April 13, 3 p.m.

Shortly before his death, Beethoven composed six string quartets, complex masterpieces that are rarely heard due to the extreme demands on the performers. In these revolutionary late quartets, a deaf and dying Beethoven sneers at traditional musical forms by breaking all their rules, paving the way for the modern era.

The Amici Quartet comprises four accomplished members of the Cleveland Orchestra who have performed together for more than 25 years. They will bring to life the monumental and serious Opus 135 String Quartet in C-sharp Minor and the nearly cheerful Opus 151 in F Major, the last quartet he composed. "Muss es sein? Yes, you must!"

Trio TaPASI: In Twos and Threes, Sunday, June 1, 3 p.m.

Franz Schubert wrote one of his greatest masterpieces for the arpeggione, a strange guitar-cello hybrid. Had he known how beautiful it would sound on a cello (as it is played here), he would surely have changed his mind.

Johannes Brahms expressed his feelings of love and unencumbered joy so freely in his Violin Sonata in G Major that you’ll want to weep tears of joy.

Finally, there is Mendelssohn, who, in his typical rush of passion and virtuososity, composed his tempestuous Trio in C Minor.

The performers here are all best friends: Tanya Erb and Isabel Trautwein from the Cleveland Orchestra and Pattie Wolf, a Juilliard- and Yale-trained concert pianist from St. Louis.

Rachel Bernstein, executive director of Heights Arts, is a cellist herself. She is excited to be involved with this unique series.

Showtime at Heights High

Angie Shaker

This year’s Heights High musical will be “Hello, Dolly!,” a “wonderfully documented life in America,” according to Craig McGaughey, vocal music director.

“This musical is art imitating life,” McGaughey said. “It’s set in New York City around 1900. It has a little bit of everything in it. It will be fun for the students to perform and very entertaining for the community.”

Performances will take place on Wednesday, Oct. 30; Friday, Nov. 1; and Saturday, Nov. 2, all at 7:30 p.m.; and on Sunday, Nov. 3, at 4 p.m.

The cast includes students from the high school, as well as middle and elementary schools. Tickets, priced from $6 to $12, can be purchased from all students cast in the show and can also be ordered at the “Hello, Dolly!” voicemail number: 216-310-3105. Tickets must be picked up by 3 p.m. on Oct. 25 or they will be resold. Tickets will be available in the main office of Heights High starting on Oct. 7.

Angie Shaker is the director of communications for the Cleveland Heights-University Heights City School District.
Art Spot exhibition features fresh energy, ideas from CIA students

Ann McGuire

Don’t expect classical still-life paintings in the current exhibition at Art Spot, but do expect fresh energy and new perspectives from the five Cleveland Institute of Art (CIA) students featured.

Titled "FIVE – 2013," the show runs through Nov. 8 and features new artworks by 2013 CIA graduates Lindsay Matthews and Mathew Henry Grady, senior Connor Elder, and juniors Jack Sherry and Jack Subsinsky.

“It’s a good show; it’s not thematic but it’s fairly cohesive and I think the jurors had a lot to do with that,” said Tommy White, assistant professor and chair of CIA’s painting department.

Elder’s photographs, Subsinsky's paintings, works in fiber by Grady and Sherry, and pieces that Matthews calls "relics of performance art.”

Grady’s “i have everything that i could ever need” stands out. A three-dimensional work in cardboard, graphite and mixed fibers, it resembles a horse-Boy jumping rope with a rainbow.

Elder refers to his photographs as cinematic landscapes. White is particularly impressed with the patience Elder has in getting his lighting just right.

Art Spot is the gallery space in The Wine Spot at 2271 Lee Road. Almost two years ago, co-owners Susan and Adam Fleischer, in collaboration with White, established the space as an off-campus venue for quarterly exhibitions of student work.

“I get a kick out of working with the students. I think they bring a lot of energy to the space,” said Adam Fleischer. “We put very few limitations on what they can do and it seems like they enjoy having this place to hang their work.”

The Wine Spot opened in the former Seitz-Agin Hardware store—which closed in 2011 after 66 years in Cleveland Heights—and Art Spot has been part of the wine and craft beer store from the beginning.

The collaboration gives young artists expanded exposure for their work and boosts foot traffic for the owners. Students receive 100 percent of the proceeds of art sales, and their work sells regularly.

For White and his faculty colleagues, the Art Spot collaboration is a valuable teaching tool.

“What is the healthiest thing is students are rejected [by jurors],” he said. “They also learn how to professionally document their work and go through the habits of presentation in order to become exhibiting artists. The formats of the Art Spot shows are very similar to a typical gallery setting; so in that sense, students are getting prepared to learn how to exhibit their work.”

Ann McGuire is director of communications for the Cleveland Institute of Art.
Apollo’s Fire opens 22nd season on Oct. 11 in the Heights

Margi Haigh

A founding member of Apollo’s Fire, Stewart teaches Baroque flute in Oberlin Conservatory’s historical performance department. She is an avid proponent of Irish music and plays Irish flute in the Cleveland-based band Turn the Corner. She has also performed with the Cleveland Orchestra, Oberlin Baroque Ensemble, ARTEK, Cleveland Lyric Opera and Cleveland Opera.

Nagy frequently performs with Baroque ensembles in San Francisco, Los Angeles, Portland, Seattle, Chicago, New York and Philadelphia, and is the founder of the Cleveland-based ensemble Les Delices, whose debut CD was named “One of the Top Ten Early Music Discoveries of 2009” by NPR.

Apollo’s Fire performs in various venues in the region. Its Cleveland Heights concerts take place at Fairmount Presbyterian Church (2757 Fairmount Blvd.) on Friday, Oct. 11, and Saturday, Oct. 12, both at 8 p.m. A pre-concert talk, one hour before each performance, will be given by guest artist Francis Colpron.

Concert tickets start at $21. Student, senior, young adult, and group discounts are available in select seating sections. For tickets or information about other performances, call 216-320-0012 or visit www.apollosfire.org.

Margi Haigh is the box office and marketing associate for Apollo’s Fire.

CityMusic Cleveland begins 10th season with new director

David Barach

CityMusic Cleveland, with its newly appointed music director Aner Dorman, will present its 10th season opening,

Mozart Violin Concerto Tour, featuring one of the world’s foremost violinists, Rachel Barton Pine.

After performing Bruch’s Violin Concerto with CityMusic Cleveland last October, to standing ovations and stellar reviews, Pine has been invited back to perform Mozart’s five violin concertos—a different one in each of five venues.

Pine has appeared as a soloist with many of the world’s most prestigious orchestras, including those in Chicago, Montreal, Atlanta, Philadelphia, Vienna, New Zealand, Iceland and Budapest.

She has worked with well-known conductors, including Zubin Mehta, Erich Leinsdorf and Placido Domingo.

She also plays the electric violin in her rock band, Earthen Grave.

In July 2004, CityMusic Cleveland premiered with an ambitious mission to make world-class classical music available to everyone. Ten years later, the orchestra consistently performs for standing-room-only audiences throughout the region, for a total of more than 20,000 audience members a season.

CityMusic’s 10th anniversary season signals the beginning of a major new chapter in the organization’s history with the appointment of music director Aner Dorman.

Known as one of the leading composers of his generation, Dorman’s music has attracted the most famous ensembles in the world, including the New York Philharmonic, the Los Angeles Philharmonic, the Israel Philharmonic, and the San Francisco Symphony.

Of the other three pieces on the program, two are concertos for small ensembles: a 21st-century concerto Grosso by Dorman, and an 18th-century concerto in C for Two Clarinets, Two Oboes and Strings by Vivaldi.

The latter piece was considered very experimental when it was written, as it is one of the first works to feature a clarinet. The third piece on the program will be Schubert’s Third Symphony, zestful and optimistic, written during the only period in the composer’s life when he was in love.

The Cleveland Heights concert will take place on Wednesday, Oct. 23, at 7:30 p.m. at Fairmount Presbyterian Church, 2757 Fairmount Blvd.

All CityMusic Cleveland performances are free, and most include refreshments afterward.

No tickets are required, and CityMusic performs across Greater Cleveland. For more information on concerts and venues, including recommended restaurants nearby, go to http://citymusiccleveland.org.

David Barach is executive assistant of CityMusic Cleveland.

Jim Wadsworth: the man behind the music at Nighttown

James Henke

Nighttown, the restaurant located at the top of Cedar Hill in the Cedar Fairmount Business District, is as well-known for the music it presents as it is for its fine food. DownBeat magazine, which covers jazz and blues, consistently ranks it among the top jazz clubs in the country; and in 2007 the restaurant won a Cleveland Arts Prize for its shows. The person behind the music that Nighttown presents is Jim Wadsworth, a Cleveland Heights resident who runs Jim Wadsworth Productions.

Wadsworth has been booking the shows at Nighttown since June 1990. Born in Kansas City, Mo., he was the youngest of seven children, and he started getting into music during the 1960s. “My sisters would be playing Beatles’ records in their rooms, and I began taking it all in,” he said. Wadsworth played harmonica, piano, guitar and percussion instruments, and he sang in his school choir. When he was 16, his parents sent him to a boarding school in Danville, Calif. While he was there, his family moved to Cleveland. After leaving the boarding school, he enrolled in Kent State University, where he got a degree in general studies, focusing on history, philosophy, sociology and political science.

After graduating from Kent, Wadsworth got a job with the Greater Cleveland Rowing Association’s Council of Smaller Enterprises (COSE). “I was selling Blue Cross medical insurance plans, and I made sales calls all over Cleveland,” he said. “I really got to know the area.” A year or so later, he joined the Northeast Ohio Jazz Society, and became an active volunteer for the organization, taking tickets at concerts and picking artists up at the airport. He then started doing some public relations work for Peabody’s DownUnder, the club that was located on Old River Road in the Flats. Then, in August 1990, he booked his first show for the club, an appearance by guitarist Hiram Bullock. From that point on, Wadsworth began to focus on music.

In 1991, he started booking shows at Rhythms jazz club in Playhouse Square. “There was a restaurant there called Getty’s, and they added this new room so they could present music. Suddenly I had a venue of my own,” he said. Rhythms was sold in 1994, and Wadsworth went back to booking shows at Peabody’s. He then moved on to Willbert’s on Huron Street and then to the Diamondback Brewery on Prospect Avenue. Finally, in 1999, he hooked up with Nighttown, and the rest is history. His favorite Nighttown shows include appearances by Ahmad Jamal, McCoy Tyner, the Count Basie Orchestra, Hugh Masekela and Chucho Valdés. “There have been at least 150 shows that would be at the top of my list,” he said.

Over the years, Nighttown’s programming has evolved. “We started out with more traditional jazz,” Wadsworth said. “Jazz crosses over into so many different categories, and we now present five or six shows a week. So we have more slots to fill, and we present folk music, international music, cabaret and even classical music. Nighttown is a community center, and people are there for a variety of different reasons.”

Future shows at Nighttown include appearances by the Hot Club of Detroit, who will be there with French singer Cyritlle Aimée, on Oct. 11. Italian guitarist Beppe Gambetta, who will be performing on Oct. 16; and Tommy Tune, the Broadway singer, tap dancer and winner of nine Tony Awards, who will be at Nighttown on Dec. 4 and 5. “We try to be responsive to the community and give them what they want,” Wadsworth said. “And we also like to be an avenue of musical discovery for the people.”

James Henke, a Cleveland Heights resident, was a writer and editor at Rolling Stone magazine for 15 years. He is also the author of several books, including biographies of Jim Morrison, John Lennon and Bob Marley.

Cleveland Chamber Music Society launches 64th season

David Richardson

To hear renowned artists in one of Cleveland’s finest musical spaces, make your way to Plymouth Church off Shaker Square during the 2013-14 season. The Cleveland Chamber Music Society (CCMS) is offering eight concerts by some of the world’s best-known musicians and some exciting new performers. Programs are richly diverse, including vocal, piano, and guitar ensembles as well as traditional string quartets. The acoustics at Plymouth Church are bright, warm and among the best in Cleveland for live music. The Cleveland Classical Guitar Society co-sponsors a dynamic collaboration with CCMS in December to present the Daedalus Quartet.

A special attraction in March is the complete Bartók quartets performed on two successive evenings by the renowned Takács Quartet from Hungary. Another not-to-be-missed event is the imaginative artistry of “eighth blackbird” in April, at CSU’s Waetjen Auditorium. CCMS’s concerts are affordable: general admission is $30 ($28 for seniors), and only $5 for students. A complete subscription ($170) includes a free guest ticket plus admission to the Young Artists Showcase in May 2014. All new subscribers enjoy a 20-percent discount.

For more information or to order tickets or subscriptions, visit www.clevelandchambermusic.org or call 216-391-1777. Ask about Ride Share assistance if you need transportation.

Diamond’s Flowers: a Coventry fixture since 1934

James Henke

As its second-oldest store, Diamond’s Flowers is a fixture on Coventry Road. Located at 1840 Coventry, it has been in the same location since 1934—longer than any store on the street.

Joe and Mary Diamond owned Diamond’s until 1969, when they sold it to Max Feris and his wife, Thelma Woods. The current owner is Roseana Bass, who lives in Richmond Heights.

While attending Regina High School in South Euclid, her guidance counselor suggested that she become a florist. “I said, ‘Are you out of your mind?’” Bass recalled. After high school, Bass attended Cleveland State University, and then started working at Diamond’s in 1967.

Much to her surprise, Bass enjoyed working as a florist. After a broken hip forced Feris to retire, Bass purchased the store and has operated it ever since with help from her husband, Jim.

The store’s specialty is preparing wedding and funeral arrangements, among other services. “We are now in a situation where a couple of decades ago we did someone’s wedding, and now we are doing their children’s weddings,” Bass said. “We have many regular customers who have been coming here for more than 30 years and now their children are also customers.”

Bass said that weekends tend to be busy, with people going out on dates and celebrating. Valentine’s Day is a busy holiday. “The line goes out the door around Valentine’s Day,” Bass said. She also gets a lot of business from Case Western Reserve University students, especially for fraternity and sorority parties.

Bass buys all of her flowers in Cleveland. She makes daily trips to Allied Florist, a wholesale florist on Carnegie Avenue. “I go downtown every day and pick up flowers,” she said. “Then I bring them back here to Coventry.”

When Bass bought the store, it took up two storefronts on Coventry. She downsized to one storefront in 1995, but it still retains much of its original look, including the original flower storage coolers. After many decades of operation, the business is still going strong. “I have seen lots of changes on Coventry, but I still love it here,” said Bass.

James Henke, a Cleveland Heights resident, was a writer and editor at Rolling Stone magazine for 15 years. He is also the author of several books, including biographies of Tim Morrison, John Lennon and Bob Marley.
